The New Story by Jackson Gregory
Author of "The Short Cut" and "The Outlaw"

WOLF BREED

A story of adventure in northwestern goldfields with the same fascination that is holding crowds at Douglas Fairbanks' movie adaptation of Jackson Gregory's "The Outlaw."

Can a man's essential nature be remolded by events over which he has no control? Jackson Gregory thinks so. To the great northwest, the land of adventure, come men actuated by two motives—a greed for gold, and need for escape. "No Luck Brennan" fled not the law but bitter disillusion. How his nature, warped by the betrayal of his trust is thawed to a new life by love of a charming southern girl, Ygerne, and how, just as his luck turns and he strikes gold, the crowning blow falls in discovering his sweetheart has robbed him, forms the theme of "WOLFBREED." Through the following rapid narrative, live with the customs, red-blooded people and elemental romances of the wilds where man is his own law, "the lone wolf" seeks his vengeance, to the final surprising establishment of Ygerne's fidelity, and to his own regeneration.

THE EYES OF THE ARMY AND NAVYBy Flight Lieutenant ALBERT H. MUNDAY, R.N.

A book which fills a need hitherto unfilled—no similar handbook of military aviation exists in the world. Flight Lieutenant Albert H. Munday was requested by pilot friends to compile a handbook to meet the requirements of the laymen and in this volume has added his experiences as a member of the Royal Naval Air Service to the knowledge gleaned from the Governmental text books used in Instruction Camps. The thousands of American Student-pilots who are now assembling at various flying fields at home and abroad, will find in this Handbook on Military Aviation answers to every query about flying, which is now troubling them.

Rapid Fire ENGLISH: FRENCH: GERMAN

For the Soldier

Compiled by a committee of well-known teachers who had had practical work in teaching foreign languages to troops in training. A vest-pocket-size book of carefully selected, useful words and phrases and their word sounds in English.

It is the most comprehensive and valuable book of its kind, containing Military Terms, New War Slang, Phrases needed for Shopping, Traveling, Aviation, etc., and a short résumé of French history.

Bound in strong, flexible cloth, 25 cents net

THE ELEMENTS OF NAVIGATIONBy W. J. HENDERSON

Particularly valuable for men who are preparing for the coast service, since, while it is of most convenient size, it contains the whole science of practical navigation. The author has completely revised the work and added much new material, concerning practical methods of coastwise navigation under wartime conditions, suggestion as to the study of coast skylines, the furthest development of the use of compass and lead in the blind work of unlighted nights or fogs. The inestimable value of lines of bearing in working along a coast have been added by the author.

THE HIGH HEARTBy BASIL KING

"America's Mr. Britling has come at last. The soul of patient America now aroused to her high duty to the world and herself finds here an inspiring voice."

This brilliant new novel by the author of "The Inner Shrine" is a story of social life in New York and Newport against the background of the Great War. A young Canadian girl was loved by two American men, one a patriot and the other indifferent to the great call.

WE CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHINGBy RUPERT HUGHES

"Mr. Hughes' delightfully readable and epigrammatic style gallops the reader through his more than six hundred pages without a trace of fatigue, and his crisp but pointed little philosophical comments illuminate almost every page. The story has admirable balance, but at the same time is a marvel of speed in production, for it is brought right down to the entrance of the United States into the war. The notable distinction of being the foremost interpreter of modern metropolitan life belongs unquestionably to Mr. Hughes."—Philadelphia Press.

THE LUCK OF THE IRISHBy HAROLD MacGRATH

The man who can tell a story that takes you out of yourself into the regions of adventure where you would like to go if you were free, and makes the hero do what you would like to do if you were a hero yourself is a public benefactor. MacGrath passes this test in his new novel of mystery and stirring episodes with flying colors. From New York to Singapore, the luck of the Irish leads the hero into thrilling situations.

JACOBS' BEST FALL NOVELS

Ridgwell Cullum's
New Western Romance

THE FORFEIT

Here is Ridgwell Cullum at his best. In a smashing tale of love and stirring adventure, he tells of the predicament of a western ranchman who, after swearing revenge upon the person responsible for the death of his brother, finds that his own wife is guilty.

The scene of the story is the cattle country of Montana, which Mr. Cullum knows so well and can write about so feelingly. "The Forfeit" is a big story about strong men and strong women. It is undoubtedly Mr. Cullum's best effort since "The Way of the Strong." $1.35 net.

What Hugh Gibson Saw In Belgium

Q We decided several months ago to publish "A Journal From Our Legation in Belgium" by Hugh Gibson, we thought we had a good book.

Q It is only recently that we received the complete manuscript and realized what a tremendously big book it is—THE MOST IMPORTANT WE'VE HAD IN YEARS.

Q This book will be published October 26th. With transportation conditions as they are, it will be increasingly difficult for dealers at distant points to get their re-orders in time to meet the instant rush for this book unless such orders are placed now.

Q We ask the trade to accept our announcement of this book in the spirit in which it was written—in a spirit of sincerity, of wholehearted enthusiasm and of firm conviction in the everlasting importance of this book in the annals of the war. We shall advertise it accordingly.

"So, when you see a lot of swallows on some telegraph wires and notice how restless they are and how they keep darting out and back and changing places, all the time keeping up a chatter, it is just possible they are trying to be the notes and to sing them at the same time, which is a very difficult thing to do."

(One little paragraph that tells a whole story. "Tuck-Me-In Stories" is amusing and entertaining throughout.)

The Juvenile Hit of the Season A Book of Sound Literature

It is often said that to sell well a juvenile must be movie hash or slap-stick comics. If this is your opinion, here is an exception that proves the rule. "Tuck-Me-In Stories," written and illustrated by Enos B. Comstock, is a pronounced juvenile success that is as clean and wholesome as it is original and distinctive.

All of the "Tuck-Me-In Stories" are about animals—bears, rabbits, foxes, squirrels, mice, birds—all the wild folk that children love. And as charming as the text are the many scores of story-telling illustrations—four in colors. The jacket is in three colors and goes straight to the hearts of the little folks. Book is 7½ x 9¼ inches in size, bound in cloth. $1.00 net.

The Book of Seven Wishes

By
Gertrude Alice Kay

Author of "When the Sandman Comes"

Wishing is one of the main occupations and pleasures of life with the children. Miss Kay, who made such a hit in "When the Sandman Comes" because of her keen understanding and sympathy with the children's viewpoint, presents in her new book a group of seven unique stories based on wishes which are bound to appeal to every normal child. Miss Kay's ability to illustrate her work is demonstrated still further in her attractive drawings in color and in line.

On the Right of the British Line

by

Captain Gilbert Nobbs, L.R.B.

The Hon. Henry van Dyke gives this account of how "On the Right of the British Line" came to be written and published:

"Four of us were dining together at the Athenaeum Club in London in February, 1917. One of the party was a young British captain who had been absolutely blinded and afterwards taken prisoner by the Germans in the fighting on the Somme front. He was the most cheerful one of the party, and his narrative of his experiences was full of intense interest. When he went into the smoking room he said very quietly: "Look here, you fellows. I can hear from your voices that you are pitying me because I am blind. Don't pity me. Congratulate me because I am alive." I urged him to write down some of the wonderful things which he had been telling us so simply and with such a deep insight into human nature and the psychology of courage and suffering. He wrote the story and I brought the manuscript to America and took it to the publisher. This is how Captain Nobbs' book "On the Right of the British Line" came to be brought out here by the Scribners. It seems to me one of the very best, most truthful, and most moving books on the war that I have read."

BOOKS FOR SOLDIERS

It has been much mooted whether soldiers in camp and field would have time and inclination after drilling and other duties aside from active service in the field to devote to reading. Pathetic testimony comes from veterans of our own Civil War that books then would have been a godsend to them, not only in the dull days of hospital recovery, but in the not less dull days of waiting in the field. This has been confirmed by experience abroad where books are received by men in the second line trenches and in "billets" with avidity and relieve many a tiresome spell of do-nothing days. There seems to be no doubt that our soldiers and sailors will use books and should have them to the full.

Under the auspices of the American Library Association the last week of September was made the occasion of collecting a library war service fund; and the desired million dollars has been raised to $1,200,000 by actual subscriptions, thru the generosity of librarians, library readers, and the public generally. This includes a liberal grant from the Carnegie Corporation for library buildings for each camp, so that the greater part of the million dollars will be directly available for books and administration. Nearly half a million dollars will be available for books, in addition to those given directly by the public and accepted by library experts for camp and field use. A list of several thousand books has been prepared by a committee of the American Library Association and publishers represented have as a rule made special arrangements for their supply in bulk. The list is comprehensive, not only of books for entertainment but of books for improvement and instruction, and it has been emphasized in the selection that many soldiers will desire to take the opportunity to study up their several home callings, or post themselves in new lines of possible future activity.

The question has been asked whether this leaves any field of activity for the bookseller. In fact a few of the less far-seeing bookmen have looked a bit askance at the activity of the American Library Association in "cornering" the book distributing function. However, as Mr. Melcher has so well demonstrated in Indianapolis, there is an abundant field for private bookselling to soldiers and for soldiers—so abundant in fact that there will undoubtedly be plenty of soldier business for both bookstore and library. With the heterogeneous character of the men in the camps and the hard wear the books will receive from even the ordinarily more fastidious men, the bookseller has a strong selling appeal to offer friends and relatives of well-to-do soldiers in the simple desirability of providing clean books for them to read. Then again, the missionary work the camp libraries may do in turning many men to books out of sheer ennui perhaps—men who never before bothered to read—will undoubtedly redound to the bookseller's advantage after the war when these men return to civilian life.

Every bookseller should be prepared to suggest to all his customers that the library provision should be supplemented by individual donations. Especially with the approach of the Christmas season, it should be emphasized that the well chosen book will be the most welcome of presents in the camp or trenches. It is compact, it provides fresh entertainment for many days of reading, or, if a book of improvement or instruction, goes beyond this and provides not only a means of disposing of weary hours, but adds to the practical helpfulness of the soldier as he returns to everyday citizenship. This is an opportunity of which the bookseller should make the most equally from patriotic and commercial reasons. This special number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is intended to be a help in this direction.

SOME probably unnecessary alarm has been expressed in trade circles over the temporary price cutting flurry that has appeared in one or two places recently. In one city, for instance, a dealer—it is not his first tilt with net prices—has nailed a copy of a "leader" to the front of his store with the somewhat quixotic boast in large letters, "I will beat the trust!" There are of course two ways for the trade to meet such a move: cut to meet him or even undercut him, or simply ignore his dare to the rest of the trade to follow him. The first, like racing down hill, is a fool's holiday in which folly waits upon disaster. There is no need to reiterate to the bookseller the fact he already knows all too well that price cutting never has and never will do anyone or any trade any good. Rather than bolt with the price cutter, thereby giving him the chance to boast that he sets the pace, it is far wiser for the rest of the trade to stand shoulder to shoulder by the net price; it is lonesome work losing money alone and the price cutter, especially if he is a regular bookseller and not a department store using cut priced books as leaders for other goods, will eventually find it to his own interest to restore the price.

How much can be done in the event of a price break by quick work on the part of the local trade or even a single public spirited bookseller was well illustrated in an Eastern city last spring where a dealer slashed a price and was immediately followed by two local department stores, "forced," they claimed, as they always claim in such a case, "to meet the new level of competition." A local bookseller immediately visited both department stores, got from them a promise to restore the old price "if everybody else did," took this word to the original price cutter and within two days after the original break the net price was restored.

WHAT TOMMY ATKINS IS READING

THE "Tommy Atkins" and the American "Sammy" may be "something different again" in tastes and temperament, the experience of those who have been supplying reading matter for the former by the hundreds of thousands of copies during the past three years cannot fail to be suggestive to the book-trade in this country at the present time. England has responded splendidly to the need of her fighters for books and this part of "England's effort" is described by Theodore W. Koch of the Library of Congress in an interesting series of articles in the Library Journal based on personal investigation in England.

THE MAGNITUDE OF THE WORK IN ENGLAND

The booksellers of England have forwarded literally hundreds of thousands of books to the front, while the War Library and Camp Library organizations are daily shipping books and magazines by the thousands. In November, 1914, the Admiralty asked the War Library organization to supply the sailors in the North Sea Fleet at the rate of a book a man. Not only was this done, but boxes of books were sent to all the guards around the coasts of the British Isles, the Shetland and Orkney Isles, and the West Coast of Ireland. When the beds at Gallipoli were being rapidly filled with the sick and wounded, a cable would come to Surrey House: "Send 25,000 books at once, light and good print." Perhaps the day before Malta had cabled for 10,000 similar books. The demand seemed to grow by leaps and bounds. No hospital at home or abroad asks without receiving the full quota requested. The library is now supplying East Africa, Bombay, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Salonika and Malta monthly with thousands of books and magazines. Fortnightly parcels go to the hospitals in France and to the Cross Channel Hospital Service. To-day the organization is supplying approximately 1810 hospitals in Great Britain, 262 in France, 58 naval hospitals and 70 hospital ships. The transport hospital ships are replenished every voyage.

SCRAP BOOKS AND PICTURE BOOKS

Those whom typhoid and dysentery had weakened were not able to hold books at all, and needed pictures instead. Mr. Rudyard Kipling had foreseen this need and asked those in charge to supply strong brown paper scrap-books filled but not crowded with pictures. His suggestion was immediately adopted. These scrapbooks are made from sheets 43 x 27 inches, folded three times, forming a book of sixteen pages about 14 x 11 inches, tied together at the back with a bow of bright ribbon. On the outside an attractive colored picture is pasted. The inside pages are filled with entertaining pictures, both in black and white and in color, interspersed with little jokes, anecdotes and very short stories from such weeklies as Punch, London Opinion, and Answers. Short poems are found to be acceptable space fillers. Comic postcards are used, but no Christmas cards. Pictures are always placed straight before the eye so that the invalid may not have to turn the scrap-book around in order to see them, for many a patient is too weak even to lift his hand, and must await the coming of a nurse in order to know what the next page has in store for him. Volunteer makers of these aids to cheer are urged to remember that they are for grown men, not for children. They have been furnished in large numbers by a generous public, and have been found invaluable. Fresh scrap-books are supplied to the hospital ships each voyage. A young soldier, just recovering from typhoid, came to the War Library on his return from Egypt and was asked to look about and tell what he would have liked best during his convalescence. "I was too tired to read," said he, "but I would have given a lot for one of those picture books." This type of convalescent can use games to advantage and so the War Library has started a Games Department. There is a never ceasing demand for playing cards, dominoes, draughts, and good jigsaw puzzles—even with a few pieces missing. Anything that can be packed flat is acceptable.

WHAT TOMMY ATKINS READS

"There's a demand among the men for handbooks on trade-handicraft subjects; and maps are most acceptable," says one English worker. "I know a gentleman whose leisure moments are filled by turning over the leaves of a Bradshaw. He enjoys it thoroly; it's like counting the beads on a rosary; station after station will remind him of journeyings to and fro in the land and bring back adventures which made them memorable to him.

"As for the officers, they ask for new six shilling novels and all kinds of lighter biographies, what Robert Louis Stevenson calls 'heroic gossip.' Here are particular books which I may name: 'Garibaldi and the Thousand' (Trevelyan), 'Beatrice d'Este' (Miss Cartwright), and 'Portraits and Sketches' (Edmund Gosse). Travel books of all sorts are acclaimed; so, too, are the light-to-hold edition of Thackeray, Dickens, E. A. Poe, Kipling and Meredith."

"Detective stories are shouted for; so is the 'Bull-dog Breed,' 'The Red Seal' and 'The Adventure' series; and all sorts of penny novelettes," according to one observer quoted by Dr. Koch. "Of course, all sevenpenny sixpenny and shilling editions are invaluable from their handy size and good print. And now for the favorite authors—they are nearly all in the sixpenny and sevenpenny series, and come in grand procession of favor, Nat Gould, Jack London, Rudyard Kipling, William Le-Queux, Ridgwell Cullum, Charles Garvice, Guy Boothby, A. Conan Doyle, W. W. Jacobs, Florence Barclay, Ian Hay, Cutcliffe Hyne, 'Q,' John Oxenham, H. A. Vachell, Edgar Wallace, Rider Haggard, Dumas, and Robert Louis Stevenson."

Nat Gould will be a new name to American soldiers, but so popular is he abroad that the war may introduce him to the American book-buying market.

"All detective stories—good detective stories—are hailed with joy," is another comment. "Sherlock Holmes is a physician—remember that. But less you feel that this ephemeral class of books is all that is asked for, I must say that poetry is in demand. The first and second sixpenny series of the 'Hundred Best Poems' go out in generous instalments; so do the 'Hundred Best Love Poems.' Shakespeare visits the hospitals, but we prefer him in single plays; a complete volume is too bulky, perhaps too formidable. A book must not be too formidable or sombre to look at."

HOSPITAL READING

Soldiers in hospital call for practically the same books as the soldier in camp or active service. A glance thru the order books will show the type of popular reading chosen by the patient:

Nat Gould is here again a favorite, tho if one man were reading "Jockey Jack" the man in the next bed might just as likely as not be reading Shakespeare, or the "Pilgrim's Progress," or Shelley, or Meredith, or Conrad, or a volume of the Everyman's Encyclopædia which was contributed by Mr. Dent on request.

Some of the men showed an anxiety to have a book waiting for them after an operation, so that they might begin to read it and forget some of their pain if possible.

From these men in one hospital came requests for books on aeroplanes; architecture; cabinet making and old furniture; chemistry, organic and inorganic; coal mining; drawing and painting; electricity; engineering in its various branches; fish curing; gardening and forestry; languages; meteorology; music; paper making; printing; submarines; veterinary medicine; violin making, and so on. The soldier who asked for the book on fish curing was from Nova Scotia, and fish curing was his father's business. The son wanted to learn the English method and gain all the information he could about the subject while in England, before he was sent back home. A book on Sheffield plate was lent to the hospital library by an antiquary and proved to be a veritable godsend to a crippled soldier who had been a second-hand dealer before the war and who considered it a rare chance that had thrown that book in his way. He made copious notes from it which he said would be invaluable to him afterwards.

Altho the hospital librarians have not attempted to force good books on the soldiers, they always take pains to have them within reach. They have found that when the men something to read and for many hours the monotony of hospital life was greatly relieved. A popular paper-bound novel by Nat Gould lasts less than a week. The men hide it for fear of its being taken away. They pass it surreptitiously to a comrade in the next bed, or carry it in their pockets like a treasure trove. It is literally read to pieces.

"Cramped in a crumbling dug-out, time passes slowly," writes one man, "and the monotony is greatly relieved by a few 'mags' from home. The men all ask for pre-war magazines. It is nice to get away from it for a time." Another letter brought this message: "The last parcel of your books came just as we had been relieved after the gas attack, and there is nothing like a book for taking one's mind off what one has seen and gone thru." "The lads were never so pleased in their lives as when I told them I had some books for them," is the way one lance-corporal puts it. An extract from another officer's letter tells the same story: "Most of the men were lying or sitting about with nothing to do. When I said I had a box of books to lend, they were around me in a minute like a lot of hounds at a worry, and in less than no time each had a book—at least as far as they would go. Those who hadn't been quick enough were trying to get the lucky ones to read aloud. It would have done you good to see how the men enjoyed getting the books. . . . May we have more, as many more as you can spare?" "All the books sent seem very welcome, for soldiers' tastes vary," says one writer from "somewhere in France." Men in Salonika have requested a copy of a Greek history, their interest in the subject being awakened by the treasures of antiquity which they excavated while digging trenches. "It would give us great joy to get a few books on Syria and Palestine," is the statement of an Army chaplain. "I myself can get but few books—none about the Crusaders. Only Dr. Stewart's about the Holy Land. And my men are hungry for information."

A. St. John Adcock, novelist, on a visit to the Y. M. C. A. huts in France and Flanders, made some interesting discoveries about the kind of literature required there. The chief demand was, of course, for fiction, but fiction of the better class. One man who was reading Macaulay's History regretted that there was only an odd first volume in the library, and he was anxious to get hold of the second. A sergeant ran off a score of titles of novels and memoirs he had recently read, and he was now tackling Boswell. He was anxious to know if Mr. Adcock could send him half a dozen copies of Omar Khayyám, which he would like to give to some of his men as Christmas presents. There were several Dickens enthusiasts in the camp. One who knew nothing of him before he went out, except the "Tale of Two Cities," had, since he had been in France, borrowed and read "David Copperfield" and "Great Expectations," and was now deep in "Our Mutual Friend."

"I overtook a smart young soldier one after-once began on a better class of literature they did not ordinarily return to the old stuff. Robert Louis Stevenson has lifted many of the patients in this hospital to a higher plane of reading.

SOLDIER LETTERS REVEALING THE NEED FOR BOOKS

Letters from soldiers throw much light on how badly books are wanted:

"I don't know how we should live without your books," writes one wounded soldier. "I am just waiting until my pal has finished to get hold of his book," writes another. "We have no books," is the appeal of an isolated group of wounded in Egypt. "All we have had to read here was a scrap of the advertisement page of a newspaper picked up on the desert, and on it we saw that you send books to sick and wounded. Please hurry up and send some. The flies are awful."

An officer in charge of a Casualty Clearing Hospital writes of the great joy in camp when he distributed the contents of a parcel among the patients. Every man in the hospital had noon on the fringe of one of the base camps," writes Mr. Adcock "He limped slightly, and as we walked together I noticed a copy of Browning sticking out of his breast pocket, and remarked upon it. It seemed he had been for three weeks in the convalescent part of the camp with a badly sprained ankle, and had profited by that leisure to read for the first time the whole of Keats and Wordsworth, and was just beginning Browning. He came from Manchester and was, in civil life, a musician. 'But,' he laughed, 'you can't bring a 'cello with you on active service, so I have fallen back more on reading. I was always fond of it, but I've read more in the ten months I have been here than in any ten months at home.' He drew the Browning from his pocket and I noticed the Y. M. C. A. stamp on it. 'Yes,' he said, 'they've got some fine little libraries in the huts. They are a godsend to the chaps here. But I haven't been able to come across a Shelley or a Francis Thompson yet. I would like to read Thompson.'"

Of interest in this connection is the following passage from one of Hugh's letters from the front in "Mr. Britling":

"We read, of course. But there never could be a library big enough to keep us going. We can do with all sorts of books, but I don't think the ordinary sensational novel is quite the catch it was for a lot of them in peace time. Some break towards serious reading in the oddest fashion. Old Park, for example, says he wants books you can chew; he is reading a cheap edition of 'The Origin of Species.' He used to regard Florence Warden and William Le Queux as the supreme delights of print. I wish you could send him Metchnikoff's 'Nature of Man' or Pearson's 'Ethics of Free Thought.' I feel I am building up his tender mind. Not for me tho, Daddy. Nothing of that sort for me. These things take people differently. What I want here is literary opium. I want something about fauns and nymphs in broad low glades. I would like to read Spenser's 'Faerie Queene.' I don't think I have read it, and yet I have a very distinct impression of knights and dragons and sorcerers and wicked magic ladies moving thru a sort of Pre-Raphaelite tapestry scenery—only with a light on them. I could do with some Hewlett of the 'Forest Lovers' kind. Or with Joseph Conrad in his Kew Palm-house mood. And there is a book, I once looked into it at a man's room in London; I don't know the title, but it was by Richard Garnett, and it was all about gods who were in reduced circumstances but amidst sunny picturesque scenery—scenery without steel, or poles, or wire—a thing after the manner of Heine's 'Florentine Nights.' Any book about Greek gods would be welcome, anything about temples of ivory-colored stone and purple seas, red caps, chests of jewels, and lizards in the sun. I wish there was another 'Thais.' The men here are getting a kind of newspaper sheet of literature scraps called The Times Broad-sheets. Snippets, but mostly from good stuff.

They're small enough to stir the appetite, but not to satisfy it. Rather an irritant—and one wants no irritant. I used to imagine reading was meant to be a stimulant. Out here it has to be an anodyne."

POETRY IN THE TRENCHES

As indicated above, poetry has withstood the fire test of the trenches surprisingly—or perhaps not surprisingly but as was only to be expected in view of the fact that it expresses so persistently the spiritual values of life. James Norman Hall told some time ago, it will be remembered, how on turning into a communication trench at two one rainy morning a friend of his was startled to hear between the heavy "crumps" of the shells "Comus" being read aloud.

A useful warning against war poetry is added by Hall. "We have no need of war verse in the trenches," he tells us. "What we do need is something which will take our minds off the horrors of modern warfare, after the strain is relaxed."

The nearest analogy to American troops in general outlook and interest is found in England's overseas soldiers now in France and we are told that "the oversea soldier is an omnivorous reader." A worker closely in touch with the work in England also comments on the curiously different appetite for books shown by the overseas contingent, remarking that the Canadians have an insatiable desire for books of reference, as evidenced by three requests from Colonial Hospitals asking for the Encyclopedia Britannica in forty volumes—all of which were duly granted.

CASELL AND CO.'S WAR SAVINGS ASSOCIATION—THE FIRST OF ITS KIND IN LONDON

WHEN, something over a year ago, the National War Savings Association movement was launched in England, Cassell & Co.—true to the liberal and public spirited ideals of its founder, John Cassell—responded immediately and had the honor of being the first firm in London to start such an association among its staff. A short time ago the employees of the House of Cassell met in the yard of La Belle Sauvage—as the great London publishing plant is grotesquely named—in celebration of the first anniversary of the founding of Cassell's War Saving Association and the statement of the first year's work was read. In addition to over 3000 £1 Certificates, applied for a few pence at a time, £3153 worth of certificates had been purchased outright, without the use of collecting cards. Members who numbered 550 had taken up 6028 War Savings Certificates, representing £4671 14s., and they had paid in cash to the Government, £4198 3s. 6d. No fewer than 70,900 sixpenny coupons had been bought by the members during the year.

"The secret of the success of our War Savings Association," Mr. Arthur Spurgeon, Managing Director of Cassell & Co., tells us, "was that the Directors put the organization in motion and then left the men to carry it out. I do not know who are the holders of the Certificates. The men necessarily felt shy of the idea that the Directors should know who were saving and to what extent; so I scrupulously held aloof. The Overseer of the News Department is the Chairman and Treasurer of the Committee, and the Father of the Compositors' Chapel is a member of the Committee. The female members of the staff are represented by one of the leading women in the Binding Department, and the Secretary of the Company takes charge of the cash."

The operation of the English War Savings Associations is very interesting and the scheme has caught on extensively among even the most humble workers. When a local war savings association is formed it applies for a certificate of affiliation with the National Committee. A committee is then appointed by the local association, its members to handle without compensation the coupons, certificate books and books of account sent out by the National Committee. A War Savings Certificate costs 15s. 6d. and in five years can be cashed for £1. Any person of either sex is eligible for membership, but no individual may hold more than 500 certificates. Each member is supplied, free of charge, with a member's Coupon Card. Subscriptions are paid by buying special sixpenny coupons and affixing them to cards. When a member has 31 sixpenny coupons on his card he is given a War Savings Certificate in exchange for the completed card.

It is, of course, entirely probable that after the war the savings habit bred by this plan will continue in the form of numerous small thrift associations.

Among the other war-time staff organizations in the Cassell plant are the Christmas Parcel Fund, and Cassell's Help Fund. Thru the former, each of the more than three hundred Cassell employees now with the colors received a special Christmas parcel from his fellow workers at home. Cassell's Help Fund is meant to help those left behind by members at the front. In one case where a man had left behind a family of eight, they were able to place three of the children in an orphanage, the mother was helped, and the older children were enabled to look after themselves. At Christmas-time allowances were made from this fund to many needy members and their families.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

BOSTON BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION TO HEAR EMPEY

SERGEANT EMPEY is to be the speaker at the first dinner of the season of the Boston Booksellers' Association at the Twentieth Century Club on October 24. It is also expected that the Liberty Bond Committee, composed of Messrs. Gregory, Hale and Fuller, will be heard from during the evening.

The Boston Booksellers' Association is unique among such local associations, it is believed, in that it recognizes that women are fully as desirable members and as capable of profiting by its meetings as are men, and what is more, the Boston women are not shy about attending!

IAN HAY MAY ADDRESS NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS

HUGH GIBSON, late first secretary of the American legation at Brussels, will address the New York Booksellers' League at the first of the fall dinners at the Aldine Club on Wednesday, October 17, and Major Ian Hay Beith, author of "The First Hundred Thousand," also hopes to be able to be present. There will be an unusual exhibition of war paraphernalia from the trenches specially arranged for the booksellers.

EMPEY TO SPEAK AT PHILADELPHIA BOOKSELLERS OCTOBER DINNER

THE first meeting of the Philadelphia Booksellers' Association will be held as usual at the Franklin Inn Club, Camac and St. James streets, at 6.30 P.M., Friday evening, October 19. The speaker of the evening will be Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top."

As the accommodations at the Franklin Inn Club are limited, reservations for covers must be made by Wednesday, October 17, at latest.

LAURENS MAYNARD, 1866-1917

OBITUARY NOTES

LAURENS MAYNARD, one of the founders of the firm of Small, Maynard & Co., died in New York, on October 7, after a brief illness. He was born in 1866, and after graduating from the Harvard Law School began the practice of law in Boston. Always interested in books, particularly Whitman, he published from his law office in 1897 a volume entitled "Calamus," a series of letters written by Walt Whitman to Peter Doyle. This led to his becoming acquainted with Herbert Small and to their forming a partnership with Bliss Carman, under the firm name of Small, Maynard & Company. Mr. Maynard remained with them for about ten years, but on the death of Mr. Small resigned from the firm and associated himself with several Eastern publishers as their traveler, covering mainly the "Coast" territory. At the time of his death he was representing no less than fourteen houses. Few men on the road during the past ten years were better known or more generally liked than Laurens Maynard. He was ill only a few days and his death was entirely unexpected.

PERSONAL NOTES

LOUIS C. GREENE, formerly with A. A. Knopf, is now in charge of the sales department of the Bloch Publishing Co., 40 E. 14th St., New York City.

THOMAS SWEET, one of the older employes of Doubleday, Page & Co. and for a number of years head of the job press department, has enlisted in the Naval Reserve. Otis S. Powell, of the traveling force, has been drafted and is now at Camp Upton. More than 40 men have entered service from Country Life Press since the war began, and on Christmas Day each one of these will receive a large box of "eats" and "smokes" from their former co-workers who already have collected a sum of several hundred dollars for the purpose.

PERIODICAL NOTES

The Dial has purchased the subscription list of The Seven Arts and will fill out unexpired subscriptions.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

HENRI BARBUSSE's "Under Fire" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) was published in France last year under the title "Le Feu" where it won the prize of the Goncourt Academie for the best work published during the year.

THE TRIAL of the heads of the News Print Manufacturers' Association for alleged conspiracy to fix prices arbitrarily and regulate the paper output has been postponed by Judge Learned Hand in the United States District Court to November 5.

"FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE AND HOW TO ATTAIN IT" by Henry Colman Cutting, president of the Federal Shipbuilding Corporation, is described as an A. B. C. of finance for the novice and an X. Y. Z. of finance for the financier. It is published by the Financial Liberty League, 7 Pine St., New York City.

IF THERE is anywhere a very small person who doesn't love bunny stories and pictures he will be instantly won over by Enos B. Comstock's "Tuck-Me-In Stories," just published by Moffat, Yard & Co. There are squirrels, too, and mice and birds and other little creatures pictured in most amusing situations.

"PICTURES OF RUINED BELGIUM," just published by the John Lane Co., shows the devastation of the towns and country in seventy-two pen and ink sketches drawn on the spot by Louis Berden. The descriptions, the French text by Georges Verdavaine, the translation by J. Lewis May, are founded on official reports.

HENRY T. FINCK, the veteran music critic of the New York Evening Post, in his "Richard Strauss, the Man and His Works," just published by Little, Brown & Co., determines Strauss' place in the history of music and comments critically on his more important compositions, including the tone-poems and operas.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS wishes to warn the trade against being misled by the belief that a number of so-called "Oxford" books recently issued are its publications. The well-known imprint Oxford University Press appears on all its authorized publications.

"GREAT POSSESSIONS" is the title of the new David Grayson book which Doubleday, Page & Co. has ready for immediate publication. All true Graysonians will understand that "the great possessions" are not of the sort that are locked up in safes or figure on the books of the property appraiser.

"THE CAMPAIGN PRAYER-BOOK," published by Thomas Nelson & Sons, is an edition of the Book of Common Prayer according to the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church, designed especially for men in the army and navy. Rev. Milo H. Gates, of Trinity Parish, New York City, writes the introduction.

THE WORLD PUBLISHING Co. is bringing out a limited edition in three large volumes of "Private Lives of Kaiser William II and His Consort, Being the Secret History of the Court of Berlin from the Papers and Diaries of Ursula, Countess von Eppinghoven," by Henry W. Fischer.

"THE SOLDIER'S SERVICE DICTIONARY," edited by Frank H. Vizetelly, published by Funk & Wagnalls, contains 10,000 English and French military and conversational words and phrases arranged in alphabetical order. All the words peculiar to every branch of the service are included in a form convenient for use on the spot.

THOSE WHO LIKE the leisurely story have found pleasure in the works of Archibald Marshall, who has nine novels to his credit written within ten years. In his latest, "Abington Abbey," to be published soon by Dodd, Mead & Co., this Trollope of the twentieth century unfolds another chronicle of the world of English country gentlefolk.

"THE EASTERN QUESTION," by J. A. R. Marriott has recently been published by the Oxford University Press. It is an historical study in European diplomacy from 1817 to 1914. It contains nine maps and appendices giving lists of Ottoman rulers, genealogies and the shrinkage of the Ottoman Empire in Europe.

NEW PUBLICATIONS of the National Military Publishing Co. are: "A Soldier's Guide," by Lieutenant Colonel James M. Hutchinson, a handbook of advice; "A Soldier's Diary and Record Book," a pocket-size blank book for personal records; and "Field Entrenchments," a work used in the new allied armies, edited from official sources by E. John Solano.

THE REILLY & BRITTON Co. is offering a $50 Liberty Loan Bond for the best review of "The Heart's Kingdom" by Maria Thompson Daviess. The contest is open to all bookstore managers, buyers, retail clerks, librarians and library assistants. Reviews must be received on or before November 5. Particulars of the contest will be mailed on request.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL PAUL AZAN, author of "The War of Positions," recently published by Harvard University Press, is chief of the French Military Mission at Harvard University. The book, of which 11,000 copies have been printed since August 11, is based upon the author's work as an organizer and teacher in officers' training camps in France and America.

TYPE AND BINDING are important items in a testament designed for war service. The John C. Winston Co. is offering a soldier's and sailor's testament said to be the smallest large type testament made. The "Clear NUType Edition" is bound in khaki cloth or pig grained brown leather with button flap and has the unique feature of containing President Wilson's message.

WHAT "THE PLATTSBURG MANUAL" is to the officers' training camps, "The Cantonment Manual," compiled by Major W. G. Kilner and Lieutenant A. J. MacElroy, is to the National Army. The enlisted man will find in it, in concise and simplified form, just the help he needs in qualifying for corporal or sergeant. The "Manual" is announced by D. Appleton and Co.

IN A generation when the submarine is only mildly marvelous to the childish mind. "The Water Babies" continues to hold its own; for at the proper age fiction will always prove more alluring than fact. This new edition of Kingsley's classic has been added recently to Lippincott's wisely named series, Stories All Children Love. The illustrations are in color by Maria L. Kirk.

"THE CORTINA FRENCH-ENGLISH RED CROSS INSTRUCTOR," compiled by Jean A. Picard and published recently by the Cortina Academy of Languages, is intended as an easy shortcut to such French as physicians, Red Cross nurses, orderlies and ambulance assistants will need in their work. The Cortina Academy also publishes M. Picard's "French and English Military Manual."

BRER FOX, Brer Rabbit and all their famous coterie are here again, put into delightful colored pictures by Milo Winter. The holiday edition of Joel Chandler Harris' immortal "Nights with Uncle Remus" just published by Houghton Mifflin Co. has been prepared especially for children and omits the long and learned introduction which was of interest to students of Afro-American folklore.

FROM THE COVER of Talbot Mundy's "The Winds of the World" peers a mysterious face swathed in an Indian head-dress. Risaldas-Major Rangoor Singh is said to dominate this romance of the outbreak of the war, of German plots and Indian loyalty. The book, which contains some of the same characters as the author's "King, of the Khyber Rifles," will be published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co., October 25.

FEW AMERICAN men of letters have as interesting memories of their times and contemporaries as Professor Brander Matthews. He has brought these together in an entertaining biography just published by Charles Scribner's Sons. "These Many Years" reveals the New York of an older day, the London where Professor Matthews was one of the best known of Americans and the Paris where, as a friend of Coquelin, he was welcomed in dramatic circles.

FAST ON THE HEELS of "The Dark Star" comes a new book by Robert W. Chambers, "Barbarians," published this month by D. Appleton & Co. It is the story of a little group of men, Americans, Frenchmen, and a Belgian, who determine to purge their souls in the fight for the freedom of the world. Aside from the romance, the book is interesting as revealing trench conditions and the life of the little French towns outside of the lines of battle.

YOUNG STUDENT air pilots now assembled at various flying fields here and abroad will find their many queries answered in "The Eyes of the Army and Navy," by Flight Lieutenant Albert H. Munday, published by Harper and Brothers. The book was written at the request of pilot friends to meet the requirements of laymen; it combines the knowledge gleaned from governmental text books used in instruction camps with the author's experience as a member of the Royal Naval Air Service.

WHAT CHILD has not longed to know what else Alice did after she completed her adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking-glass! Now John Rae has had the temerity to start in where his famous predecessor left off with "New Adventures of 'Alice'" and has gone Lewis Carroll one better by doing the pictures himself. A lot of little folks will stand ready to justify his rashness. The illustrations, while pleasantly reminiscent of the immortal Tenniel pictures, have originality and distinctive charm. This attractive volume has just been published by P. F. Volland.

Mr. Ditmar, the director of the mills, is passionately attracted by Janet and since he believes he can win her in no other way he determines to marry her. She loves him and feels in him an avenue of escape from the life she hates. When she thinks he has deceived her and believes that all men of his position delight in the exploitation of those less fortunate than themselves she joins the socialists and the mill hands in a fierce industrial strike and believes that her love has changed to hatred. At last she finds comfort and joy in the beautiful village of Silliston and when she realizes that she can no longer live she gives her baby to Mrs. Maturin who has proved herself a true and sympathetic friend.

He finds Ruth Warren, owner of the shoes, on the steamer and becomes her devoted protector. Camden, another passenger, is also interested in Ruth. A series of attacks on William shows that someone is trying to remove Ruth's protector. Colburton, millionaire, seems to be following their boat in his yacht and has known Ruth before. In Singapore Ruth is inveigled into going alone to the market, where she is promptly kidnapped and taken to a house of ill-repute. William hastens to Singapore which he had left temporarily, and rescues Ruth in a battle worthy of his Irish forefathers. And in the end his Irish luck is still with him.

Nora, an Irish nurse, tells the story. She had taken Judith Drene, whose father had committed suicide after the loss of his fortune, and whose mother had died shortly after, and had brought the child up in a glorious garret supervised by three musicians who had been made Judith's guardians. The youngest of these loves Judith but realizes that she will never reciprocate. Olaf Nielson, a Norwegian violinist, seems to be the "Himself" of her dreams until Judith discovers his complete selfishness. Feeling disillusioned about life Judith is taken to Ireland by Nora where Dr. Danny, a kind old country doctor, and his adopted son John Fox try to combat her pessimism. The war comes and Judith finds in the days of sacrifice and pain, the "Himself" of her childish dreams.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in only one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

Announcement To the Trade

THE Oxford University Press advises the trade not to be misled in believing that a number of so called "Oxford" books of an educational nature, now being exploited, are its publications. The name "Oxford" is well known to the trade and literary world as representing the publications of the Oxford University Press with branches throughout the world.

As several books have recently been published and advertised as "Oxford" publications by firms other than the Oxford University Press and its branches, some misunderstanding may arise. The well known imprint OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS appears on all its authorized publications.

JUST READY—The Latest, The Best Soldier's French-English Hand Book

Made On The Same Authoritative Lines As The Famous Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionaries

It is small in price, but it is the greatest of modern American quick-reference books on French. No matter how little one knows of French, it will show him how to talk to his new comrades in the every-day language of war-time France.

Just Published

The Soldier's Service Dictionary

10,000 English, French, and Belgian Military and Conversational Words and Phrases

Edited by Frank H. Vizetelly, Litt.D., LL.D.

Managing Editor of Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary

Why and How it Will Help

This handy-sized, khaki-bound book is arranged in one alphabetical order—ready always for use on the spot. It shows how to say in French what you know how to express in English. Familiar phrases are given under their principal words. It explains how to pronounce French words, by the simplest system yet devised.

Every Branch of the Service will find words peculiar to its work and personnel (and the way to say them in French) included in this guide-book. All words of command are shown in English and French. In the same way it presents the technical terms and others used by the Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry, Engineers, Signal Corps, Telegraph, Telephone, Wireless, Army Transport Branch, Ammunition Service, Medical Staff, Ambulance Corps, Nursing Service, the Navy, and the Aviation Corps. It explains many new and useful terms peculiar to the soldier's vernacular. It was projected especially for Officers and Soldiers of the American Army, who must grasp the rudiments of French conversation in a very limited time.

Bound in Weather-Proof Khaki Cloth. Price $1.00 net; with Quick-Reference, Thumb-Notch Index, $1.25.

Many Organizations Are Giving Those Books to Enlisted Members and Local Contingents

Every man in the Army, Navy, or any other branch of the war service, should have a French vocabulary. He will need it constantly when he is actually engaged in the war and comes into daily contact with the French people. It will help him to understand his allies better and it will add immensely to his personal comfort, convenience and pleasure while he is in France. There is no better book on the market for this purpose than the

Cassell's Pocket-Sized French-English Dictionary

French-English ("The Little Red Book") English-French

This handy little volume weighs only a few ounces and yet it contains 28,000 words defined, the French translations of over 14,000 English words and the English meanings of the same number of French words. Contains also tables of weights and measures, menu terms, money values in French, English and American currency and a wealth of other information needed by the American in France. This is just the book to help you in conversation with your French comrades. Handy pocket size for odd-moment study or quick reference. 576 pp.

Bound in Cloth, 60c; in Full Red Flexible Leather, postpaid for $1.00. Double Thumb-Notch Indexed, 35c extra.

How to Live at the Front

For the American Soldier From an English Comrade-at-Arms

By HECTOR MacQUARRIE, Second Lieutenant, Royal Field Artillery

12 Photogravure Illustrations.

$1.25 net

Gives an intimate informative and stirring account of Battle, Fear, Courage, Disease, Wise Precaution, etc., etc. The author tells the American soldier what he may expect in France. The reading will make a man feel at home among the Tommies, the Poilus, the French and English people whom he sees on leave, and will show him how to avoid danger and thus fight for his country instead of dying for it. Every American soldier should read it before he goes to France.
